New fonts and graphics collections
from the creators of PrintingPress software

Designing stationery on your computer doesn't mean settling for tired clip art, boring fonts or grainy images swiped from the Internet. Mountaincow is introducing two new sets of fonts and graphics offering unique and stylish designs.

Created especially to work with Mountaincow's PrintingPress software for invitations, the fonts and graphics packages also can be used with other software on a Windows PC or Macintosh computer.

Fonts & Graphics Collection 2 ($39.95) includes 12 original fonts (including 2 Hebrew fonts), 200 professional quality images, 100 full-color borders and 50 background patterns. The new images are brightly colored and fun, including ice cream and sweets, fruits and vegetables, sports, summer, animals and holidays. The borders and backgrounds include chic argyles, stripes, and polka-dots, as well as whimsical patterns such as cow spots and clouds.

"We wanted to broaden our collection to provide new options for our customers," says Megan Eisen, CEO of Mountaincow and designer of all the fonts and graphics. "We also believe there can never be too many fresh, elegant fonts available for everyone's invitations."

The fonts include three new sophisticated script fonts plus a modern serif font that includes all the European accented characters for people who are using Spanish, French or German lettering on their invitations. The two stylish Hebrew fonts add distinction to invitations for Jewish weddings and bar mitzvahs.

Decorative Letters & Numbers ($39.95) is packed with more than 2500 letter and number designs and two decorative fonts. "So many of our customers use PrintingPress to print birthday party invitations for their children that I created a collection of upper and lower case letters and numbers in dozens of fun patterns," says Eisen. The fairy-tale–inspired decorative fonts are designed with all the capital letters encased in a box with vines, and include both English and Hebrew versions.
